About Slamology

Launched in 2004, Truckshow.org's event, Slamology, was started in support of GaugeMagazine.com, and to give back to and reach out to its core followers. Donnie Babb, founder, felt that there was a void of really great enthusiast events in the Midwest, and he wanted to host the kind of event that he and his family would want to attend. Sixteen years later, Slamology has grown into a weekend of thousands of custom cars, music, family friendly activities, and the world's largest car stereo sound-off. Slamology attracts enthusiasts from all over the country as well as international participants.

About Gauge Media

Indianapolis based Gauge Media Group, Inc., founded by Donnie Babb, has been in existence since 1999 with the primary business purpose to produce automotive enthusiast internet publications via GaugeMagazine.com. From that initial business plan later grew an online wholesale and retail aftermarket parts distribution company, the Gauge Store. In addition, Gauge Studios was subsequently launched specializing in online marketing, graphic design, and printing, and which has been retained by a variety of local, regional, and national high profile clients over the years for graphic design work in automotive enthusiast design and marketing.
